Part III, Statement of Program Accomplishments:

The Director wrote numerous articles on the subject of religious liberty and same sex marriage, which were printed in such publications as The Weekly Standard. She appeared on television and radio shows to discuss the subject.

The Institute released "Marriage and the Law: A Statement of Principles", which was signed by over 100 legal and family scholars.

The Institute drafted eight amicus briefs in gay marriage litigation in six states. It organized major scholars to sign amicus briefs in behalf of marriage in three Supreme Court cases.

The Institute drafted, reviewed, and put on its website model litigation on covenant marriage and marriage education legislation. It is working on legislation reforming no-fault divorce laws and restricting artificial fertility treatments to married couples.

The Institute held another conference in its series of "working scholars' conferences", in which it invited prominent legal and family scholars to discuss the public purposes of marriage and marriage law.

The Director and other staff lectured on the subject of gay marriage at forums at San Diego State University, Princeton University, Brigham Young University, Brown University, and Harvard University.

The Director participated in drafting three separate versions of a two-page fact sheet intended for distribution by interested faith communities, one for Catholics, one for other Christians, and one for a secular audience.
